You Never Can Tell

by

George Bernard Shaw

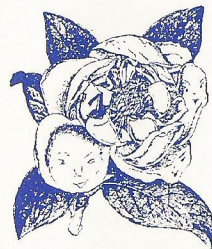

The last of Shaw's "Plays Pleasant", in which an uninhibited family from Madeira copes with an English seaside town in the Victorian era. A great comedy, in which it is apparent that all things come to him who waits.

October 20-23 1993

Steel Magnolias

by

Robert Harling

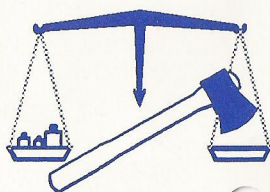

Come eavesdrop at Truvy's carport beauty-shop, where eccentric Louisiana ladies can have companionship with their coiffures, and give each other mutual support while having a shampoo.

January 12-15 1994

Blood Relations

by

Sharon Pollock

As the children's rhyme has it,
"Lizzie Borden took an axe, Gave her mother forty whacks."

A leading Canadian playwright explores the question:
"Did you do it, Lizzie?"

March 2-5 1994

DAISY Pulls It Off

by Denise Deegan

It's hard to be the new kid on the block, especially when you're starting at an exclusive Boarding School for Young Ladies, but Daisy overcomes the opposition and finds acceptance, in this amusing spoof of school-girl adventure novels.

Kanata Theatre
thanks the Advertisers
who have helped to bring you
this Programme

Kanata Theatre welcomes you to its twenty-fifth full season of plays.

We rejoice in the accomplishments of those years - almost one hundred feature length plays by nearly every important playwright, as well as countless children's plays, workshops and related activities.

You, our audience, have been with us all the way. Our achievement is your achievement. When you laugh with us, when you cry with us, when you permit yourself to be engaged by the ideas and sentiments that are the traffic of the stage, you help create the miracle of theatre. You are part of the Kanata Theatre family, and you have made possible these twenty-five happy years.

Please accept our thanks for your support. And please share with us the adventure of the seasons yet to come.

Sincerely,
Jim Holmes, President
